

Close Up

Nesting tables

Illustration by: Anna Sutor

The set of side and coffee tables "Close Up" represents the will of getting closer and looking into Italian beautiful town, into their essence.

This project wants to review with new and modern eyes a series small tables of the Fifties, when the great designer Aldo Tura used to collaborate with important artists like Alessandro Mendini, Fornasetti and others, creating beautiful and ironic pieces of furniture.

Extroverso loves the style of those times and the extraordinary pieces that brought Italian design to be acknowledged all over the world.

And loves Italy, with its unique landscapes and town, to be rediscovered too in all their beauty.

The careful eye, sensitive taste and precise hand of Anna Sutor describes perfectly this sense and beauty between architecture and oniric vision.

The plain surface becomes like a window open on the fantastic urban landscape, with its antique monuments and takes us into that unique atmosphere of each town.

The drawing is pure line, simplifying and recreating spaces, feelings. A view of Venice that can be enjoyed every day by everyone.

Anna Sutor

Anna Sutor graduated from the IUAV Faculty of Architecture in Venice in 1998. After completing a Masters degree at the Architectural Association in London she worked for Rem Koolhaas in Rotterdam and later for Norman Foster again in London. She currently lives and works in Milan predominantly as an illustrator, with particular focus on the drawing of cities in their multifold environments.

Her projects span between different layers of space design: from the pure architecture project through the design of a single room and its furnishings to conceiving its surfaces, whether walls, tables ceilings, floors. The creation of a pattern, or of surreal settings applies to wallpapers, furniture, carpets with no limits to their transformation. Her illustrations have been published in newspapers, magazines, books furnishings and wallpapers all around the world.

The Creative Quarterly review designated her one of the New visual artists of 2012.

who we are

Extroverso comes from experience and passion for design, furniture and accessories.

Through objects and shapes, Extroverso wants to celebrate Beauty, made of local traditions, art, craftsmanship, of great refinement and quality.

Design and lifestyle products, made in Italy by master craftsmen and quality manufacturer.

Extroverso creates "bridges" and "joints": it's a place where international projects, sensibilities, languages and identities meet.

A network of creative, dynamic and enthusiastic people, interacting, growing and expressing their value into the creative project of an object, a shape.

The true essence of Extroverso is beyond the product: the vision, the talent of developing the idea together with the ability of relating, listening and growing within a good team, the real secret of a good result.

Creative inspiration (i.e. "Estro") reveals in different shapes: every artist and designer expresses a personal vision of beauty, design, spaces... Extroverso is there, seeking for that vision, that inspiration, that talent, and valorize it through functional, surprising objects and furniture.

Extroverso combines modernity and tradition through the unique interpretation of artists and designers selected by its founder Manuela Dello Strologo.
